

Echoes of Green

I wanted a sleek font that felt a little futuristic while also being legible. The logo is meant to show that, through technology, we've been able to tap into the consciousness of plants and see how they actually react to humans and display human-like emotions. I wanted green to be the only saturated color because in a real situation like this, the rouge botanists would want to keep information as easily accessible as possible without too many extra bells and whistles getting in the way, but of course I want to avoid making it look too basic.
